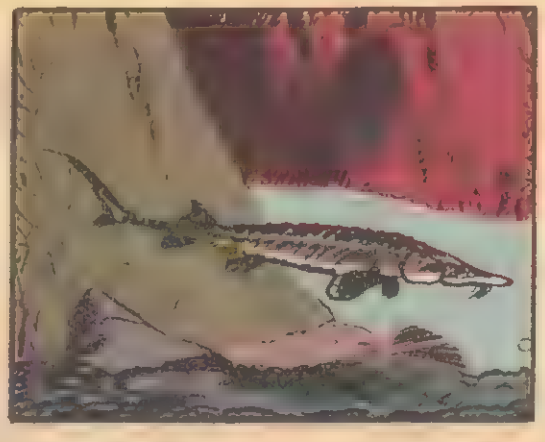
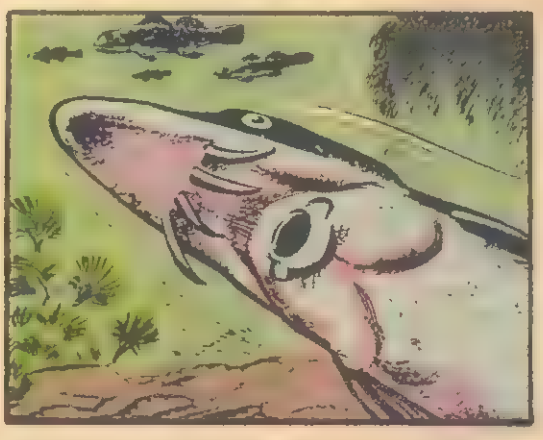
KEYS OF KNOWLEDGE

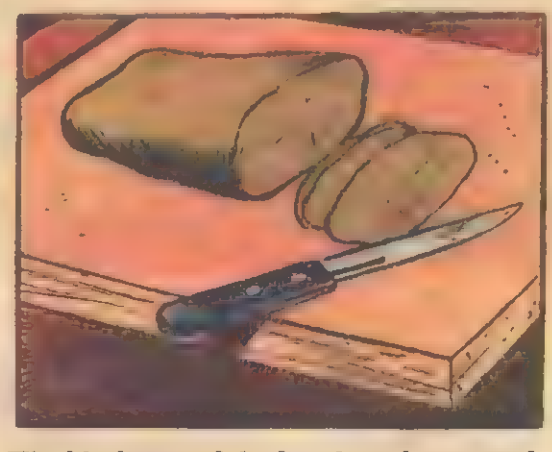
STURGEON



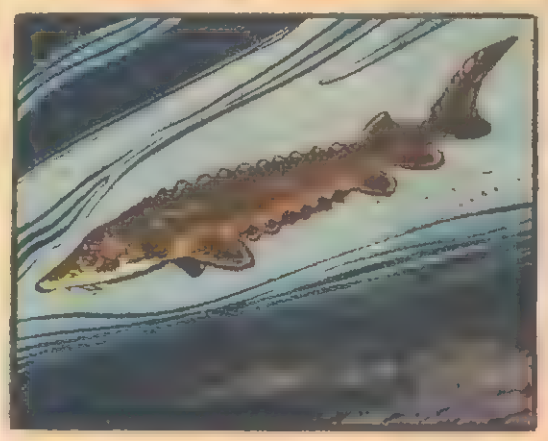
Sturgeon, a fish of ancient lineage, has a primitive tail and stiff bony plates. He grows to an average length of 10 feet.



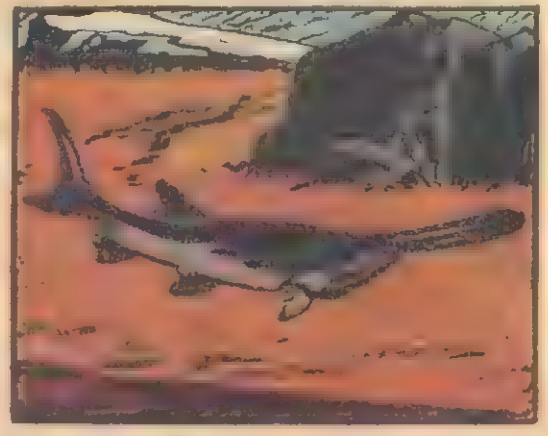
Sturgeon has chin barbels to "feel" the presence of small fish. He then shoots out his long tubular mouth to suck in his dinner.



The black eggs of the female make an excellent caviar. Sturgeon, when smoked, also is famed by gourmets the world over.



North American varieties include: Atlantic, Shovelnose and White. There is also a Lake Sturgeon, which is smaller than its brothers.



Related to the Sturgeon is the Paddlefish, which lives in fresh water. Recently this fish has become quite rare and is not seen.

PREHISTORIA

CAVE PAINTINGS

Among Man's earliest records are the prehistoric paintings found on the walls in an ancient cave at Lascaux, France. The paintings picture horses, bison and other beasts. Some are shown pierced by spears. It is believed that the pictures were painted as part of a ritual to bring success in the hunt. Other caves have pictures of sorcerers dressed in animal skins and wearing antlers or horns. The sorcerers are shown performing ritual dances and other rites of magic designed to bring good fortune in the next hunt. Primitive tribes practice such Stone Age magic in remote corners of the world to this very day.

Prehistoric paints were compounded out of powdered clay and other colored minerals which were mixed with animal fats. Colors were probably applied with sticks.

Cave paintings include pictures of the hands of prehistoric hunters, stencilled in red, black and yellow.
